Introduction:

English Language Day was first celebrated on 23rd April 2010 with the initiation of Department of Global Communications. This day was chosen because it coincides with both the birthday and death day of William Shakespeare, the bard of Stratford-upon-Avon, and World Book Day. The day prospects the development, history, culture, and achievements associated with the language. Shakespeare's creativity with the language contributed hundreds of new words and phrases that are still used today.

To commemorate this day, the Department of English and IQAC of K.H. Government Degree College, Dharmavaram, Andhra Pradesh, has organized a District Level Quiz on the English Language inviting undergraduate students of Government Degree Colleges in the Ananthapuramu and Sri Satya Sai Districts and all the Private Degree Colleges of Dharmavaram town.

Brochure

Profile of the College:

K.H. Government Degree College located in Dharmavaram, popularly known as the Silk-City of Andhra Pradesh, was established in 1982 to cater the needs of rural and down-trodden section of the town and the surrounding villages. Its avowed mission is to produce useful and well-meaning graduates with a secular and democratic outlook.

With a humble beginning and gradual growth, the College has been providing education to the wards of poor families who work at silk houses. It has been establishing cordial relations with the community who are always willing to extend their helping hand for the development of the college. The uniqueness of the college is that it is the only college that offers Botany, Chemistry, and Computer Science (BCCS) in the State. It has been introducing the new courses such as Tourism and Travel, keeping in view of the demand.

The College has enough infrastructure and excellent sports equipment to serve the requirements of the students. It has been organizing various academic, cultural, and sports events and winning the laurels from the other colleges in the district. Indeed, it has produced a large number of responsible personalities in all walks of life.

The Teaching Staff is committed and hardworking always aiming at imparting meaningful and impartial education and striving towards to offer quality education, to improve the standards of the students, to ignite their minds, to develop their critical acumen, and above all transform them into a good human being.
